WOMEN'S CLUBS GIVE COTTON AIDING HAND

Convention of City Federation Calls on All Members to Buy Cotton Dress.

OBJECT TO NEUTRALITY

Cotton found friends at the thirty-fifth convention of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, which met at the Hotel Astor yesterday afternoon. A white cotton dress was worn by the president, Miss Florence Guernsey; cotton necklaces were sold by Miss Imogene King for the benefit of sufferers in the war; every woman on the platform wore a cotton dress, and a resolution was passed that every member of the federation should buy a cotton dress this winter to show sympathy for the South.

The convention was the largest eve held by the federation. More than 2,000 women were present and twelve new clubs were received into the association. Among the speakers were Marcus M. Marks, Borough President; Miss Katharine B. Davis, Commissioner of Correction, and Miss Mary L. Read of the School of Mother-coaff.

Raymond V. Ingersoll, Commissioner of

Raymond V. Ingersoll, Commissioner of Parks in Brooklyn, spoke on "Parks and Playgrounds," Francis Wilson on "Children of the Stage" and Charles D. Coburn on "The Drama League of America."
"The compulsory education law which forces boys into school at night after they have been working all day is entirely wrong," said William H. Maxwell, City Superintendent of Schools, in his talk on a new compulsory education law. "There are 80,000 children working in New York. Many of them try to evade the compulsory education law, and I do not blame them. No boy is fit to study when he is tired out. The best compulsory education law I know has been suggested by the Association of Women Principals, of Manhattan and The Bronx, of which Miss Katherine Blake is president. This law provides that the boys shall go to school two hours a day, the time to be taken out of their employers' time, and not after working hours."

not after working hours." "I did not want to be put up as candidate for the constitutional convention," said Miss Davis, "and should have withdrawn, but the Mayor urged me to accept. The Progressive party was the only one to nominate women candidates, but we must see that women are needed in the

The federation arranged for the appoint ment of a board of honor to select the woman in the world who had performed the greatest act of devotion to humanity. A resolution urging every woman to do her best to comply with President Wilson's neutrality proclamation was discussed and tabled. It was urged that any woman with brains would form an opinion of the war and express it.

It was decided to appoint a committee to investigate a rumor that all women probation officers were to be removed except those in the women's night courts and the Court of Domestic Relations.

The New York Public Library has ar-ranged an exhibition relating to the early history of New York in honor of the commany historical rarities from the library's

The exhibition is naturally rich in early maps, and there are many old plans of the city in which Broadway extends only to Warren street, and the Bowery lane is the shaded avenue that led to the rural delights of which Union and Madison squares are now the remains. Among these maps is the so-called "stolen map" of 1610, copied from the Simancas Ar-chives, which is the earliest map of this region with details. COMPETITION KEEPS BUTTER UP, THEY SAY

Big Dealers Deny Manipulation of Price Quotations to Swell Profits.

Wholesale butter and egg dealers testifying yesterday in the proceedings brought terminals, and others expressed the belief that the Board of Health condemns too many eggs that are really fit for food.

Walter L. Fitch, president of Fitch,

"The margin of profit is far less than it was four or five years ago," he said.

Mr. Fitch said the parcel post hasn't had any effect on the business. He didn't believe the average producer is competent to manage the mechanism of the business, and asserted his belief that the middleman is absolutely essential to its success.

"The big packing house concerns," he said, "are the most formidable competitors we have. They have been in very heavily in the past ten years. New York merchants can only use the New York market. The packers can use the whole country. If New York is overstocked they can send their surplus elsewhere. Their comprehensive organization gives them a big advantage over us. I should say they control 15 per cent. of the market."

say they control 15 per cent. of the market."

Mr. Fitch said the weekly receipts of eggs in New York amount to 80,000 or 90,000 cases (thirty dozen to a case), and of butter from 40,000 to 45,000 tubs. "The supply," he said, "is about equal to the demand."

Harry D. Wheeler of the Harry Dowle Company, 334 Greenwich street, said a large percentage of wastage in eggs is due "to the extremely rough handling of railroad employees at New York terminals." It will continue, he said, as long as cases of eggs are handled as if they were filled with pig iron. The average loss by this with pig iron. The average loss by this kind of breakage, he said, is nine eggs in a case of thirty dozen.

He agreed with others that complaints are occasionally heard in the trade as to market quotations, and added: "When anybody's corns are stepped on there's sure to be a holler." Asked what remedy he could suggest to help the egg business, he said: "I'd reduce the number of egg people by half."
